Appearance: Jack Bramhall is a mountain of a man; broad shouldered and impressive, but not overly attractive. He wears loose fitting clothing, with a heavy emphasis on sports branding, and has a particular love for an old, faded denim baseball cap, which hides his receding hairline.

Roleplaying: Jack is a gentle giant. He's not especially intelligent, but he has a genuinely good nature. He doesn't enjoy hurting people, but is perfectly willing to end a fight someone else starts. He's fiercely loyal and a good friend, and relies very much on the judgements of those close to him.

JACK BRAMHALL

Ex-Football Player

Jack comes from out of the city, and was born into an upper-middleclass family in New England. He was always a precocious and athletic child, and did well in school, but was also something of a bully. His mother divorced, and this brought an improvement to his home life, banishing his abusive father.

The two of them moved to the city where he started school anew, and quickly became a close friend of Lawrence Farrow, and the two of them becoming quite a pair; Lawrence providing the wits, and Jack the brawn. He pursued and achieved an athletics scholarship, but never went far in college, and his failing grades led him to a friendship with Jessica. He tried out for the police force, but was ultimately rejected, settling for a job as an inner city firefighter.

The Group: Jack, in many ways, is the cornerstone of the friendship which binds everyone. He knows each of the characters, but has a particularly deep friendship with Lawrence and Jessica, and often plays peacemaker between the two.
